(.Reduction of myocardial infarct size in the dog by human platelet anti-aggregating drugs. The effect of two human platelet aggregation inhibitors (HPAI), i.e., heparin and salicylaldehyde isochromate on myocardial infarct size was investigated in the dog with the "coronary artery occlusion, hemorrhagic shock and reperfusion" model. Animals were randomly treated with 30 mg of heparin by iv infusion 10 min before coronary artery occlusion (0.065 mg/kg/min, 200 microliter/min), with 0.25 mg/kg of salicylaldehyde isochromate 1 min before coronary artery occlusion, or with vehicle at the same infusion rate. Ischemia was induced by the ligation of the circumflex branch of the left coronary artery. Hemorrhagic shock was induced at the time of coronary artery occlusion and then reperfusion was performed by the release of the tourniquet after 30 min of occlusion. Heparin and salicylaldehyde isochromate significantly reduced myocardial infarct size determined by the fluorescent myocardial dye, as compared to the non-treated control group (p less than 0.001). These data suggest that the plate Success; its been quite awhile since I have posted a entry on here. Its been more of a very busy few years, work etc. I am starting to get back into the hobby that I love and thought it was time to give this site some attention once
